The first time he had a chance to go to Italy, Farando and several other officers were sent to the front lines, where they were killed. His death was a great loss to the army, and his family was left with a large debt. His widow, Mrs. Farando, was a very kind and generous woman, and she was very kind to the soldiers who were left behind. She was very kind to the soldiers who were left behind, and she was very kind to the soldiers who were left behind.
